Mizuo also gives you, our readers, advice on bringing out your personality through your own wardrobe and insight into her own personal style. See what Mizuo says about fashion, style and bringing your own wardrobe to life!

How would you describe your personal style?

I am a casual dresser most of the time. Flattering and also very colorful, I would say jeans and a t-shirt but I try and make the t-shirt at least a colorful one to add some spice to it, maybe some jewelry.

Do you have a different way of dressing when you go to set?

I always try and dress flattering but as the movie progresses, it just gets worse and worse. I end up wearing comfortable boots and jeans because you're basically in your costume anyway so you just want something really comfortable to put on at the end of the day and it doesn't matter anymore what you're wearing. It starts off cute and then ends up just looking comfortable. I think I even showed up in sweatpants one time.

How would you say style brings out your own personality?

I definitely feel that clothes are the first impression so they are important but hopefully the personality, as far as just being confident in whatever you're wearing, should be the most important thing. I don't think anyone should ever feel insecure about labels or styles or be so concerned about what's trendy or what people are going to think of them with their clothes. I think the best thing is to just be happy with yourself and just be happy with what you chose to wear that day. I think that confidence just goes such a long way.

What are some of your favorite trends right now?

I'm really into the colorful jean thing. I just bought a pair of red jeans, which I think are really fun and I'm really looking forward to finding a great pair of heels. I want a statement heel, where all I'll have to do is look casual and put on this amazing, architectural shoe and that will just make the outfit.

What's the one beauty item you can't live without?

Eyeliner. I could probably just wear eyeliner and feel like I'm still made up. I feel naked when I don't have a little bit of a liner on my upper lid. That's like my staple look, I don't even have to wear mascara, but I have to have that eyeliner on there. It just feels like it gives my eyes a little more depth.
